Southeast Asia Research-based Network on Climate Change Adaptation Science (SARNCCAR) is celebrating its third year. This year, because of the past three years, we originally planned to hold the seminar at Ibaraki University. However, we decided to have it online due to the corona virus. (An offline seminar will be held next year.) Through this seminar, we aim to interact with researchers in Southeast Asia, to form a network of research centers in climate change adaptation science, and to create a place students and young researchers can play an active role. If you are interested, please join us. Participation only in areas of your own interest is very welcome.
